Mr. Philip Jacks has been temporarily appointed a Puncce Judge of the Full Court.

SIR MILES LAMPSON PROMOTED

High Commissioner For Egypt.

WILL NOT LEAVE CHINA BEFORE NOVEMBER

London, To-day.

His Majesty the King has approved the appointment of Sir Miles Lampson, Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary at Peking, to be His Majesty's High Commissioner for Egypt and Sudan.

Sir Miles Lampson, who entered the Foreign Office in 1903 and later held posts in Tokio, Peking, Sofia and elsewhere, has been British Minister in China since 1926.

In 1921 he was attached to the British Delegation to the Washington Disarmament Conference, and in 1915 to the Locarno Conference.

The appointment to Cairo of a professional diplomat of such wide experience gives assurance that the cordial Anglo-Egyptian relations which have subsisted during the past four years will continue, and that the change at the Residency implies no change of British policy.—British Wireless Service.

Sir Miles To Leave At End Of Year.

NO CHANGE OF POLICY IN EGYPT.

Reuter is informed that Sir Miles Lampson is unable leave China before November, and expects to take up his new post at Cairo before the end of the year.

It is further learned from official circles that the fact that a diplomatist has been appointed to Cairo, does not indicate any change in policy.

The retiring Commissioner is Sir Percy Loraine.

The question of a successor to Sir Miles Lampson is under consideration.—Reuter.

ENTERED FOREIGN OFFICE IN 1903.

Sir Miles Lampson, K.C.M.G., C.B., C.M.G., M.V.O., has been British Minister to China since 1926. Born in 1880, he was educated at Eton, and entered the Foreign Office in 1903. In 1906 he was appointed Secretary to the Garter Mission to Japan, and from 1908 to 1910 was 2nd. Secretary to the British Embassy at Tokyo.

In 1911 he was transferred to Sofia, but returned to the Far East again in 1916 as First Secretary to the Peking Embassy. He was appointed Acting British High Commissioner in Siberia in 1920.

OLD MAN KILLED AT ABERDEEN

Murder By Robbers Suspected.

The body of an elderly Chinese, Lau Lin Fuk, was found at 5.30 a.m. this morning in a shed close to the Aberdeen Dockyard, Aberdeen.

There was a deep cut across the neck and an axe was lying beside the body. The police suspect that the man was murdered last night by some unknown person, or persons, who had gone to the shed with intent of robbery.

The victim who was 66 years of age, was the master of the Lee Fuk Lee fish-stall at the Aberdeen market and lived at No. 4 Sai On Road.

The police are now investigating the matter, but no arrests have yet been made.

JAPAN AND RUSSIA NOT PREPARING FOR WAR

Banff Delegates Talk Peace On Behalf Of Tokyo

Banff, Alberta, To-day.

Mr. Inazono Nishio, Chairman of the Japanese group at the Institute of Pacific Relations, which opened here on Monday last under the Chairmanship of Sir Robert Falconer, has denied the statement credited to him that Japan and Russia are preparing for war. "I talk peace, not war," he declared.

Other Japanese delegates emphasised that Japan did not intend to prepare for war. The policy is definitely one of peace, they assert.—Reuter.

TOKYO PLOTTERS

Heavy Sentences Asked For Military Cadets.

REACTIONARIES AGITATE FOR LENIENCY

Tokyo, To-day.

The Government Procurators yesterday demanded sentences of eight years' imprisonment on the eleven Military Cadets concerned in last year's outrages. The Naval Court-Martial is not yet completed.

There has been a growing agitation throughout the country by reactionaries, demanding leniency towards the accused owing to the reputedly patriotic motives behind the outrages.—Reuter.

PARADES BANNED IN IRELAND

Official Threat To "Blue Shirts."

TO-MORROW'S CELEBRATIONS

Dublin, To-day.

The Minister of Justice yesterday issued a statement declaring that if any uniformed or armed parades of General O'Duffy's "Blue Shirts" organisation are held on Sunday, the organisation will be proclaimed.—Reuter.

General O'Duffy, in announcing, on Monday the postponement of the parade of the Blue Shirts, which was to have taken place last Sunday, said that he was arranging for ceremonies to take place in every county in the Free State on August 20, when Ireland commemorates the deaths of Griffith, Collins and O'Higgins.

SURF-BOARDS AT REPULSE BAY.

Prohibited From Bathing Area.

The appearance of surf-boards at Repulse Bay has caused the Government to draft regulations regarding their use at that beach. In future, without written official permission, the use of boards between the beach and the raft is prohibited.

The new regulation passed by the Governor in Council states:—Except with the permission in writing of the Inspector General of Police no person shall use any surf-board at, or off Repulse Bay beach between and including the foreshore and a line running parallel to the shore, drawn through the three rafts moored off the beach. The taking out of any surf-board from the shore to and beyond such line, and the bringing in of any surf-board from or beyond such line to the shore, shall be done with the greatest caution.

SENTENCES TO-DAY

L. L. HARRIS CONVICTED ON 25 COUNTS

Judge's Scathing Summing-Up.

"LOWEST DEPTHS OF INFAMY" REACHED

London, To-day.

"The lowest depths of infamy were reached when Capsoni's wretched wife was set to do the actual burning," declared Judge Humphreys, referring to the burning of a silk company's premises in Oxford Street, London, when concluding his remarks after a 13-hour summing up in the London fire conspiracy trial.

The trial, which is the longest ever held in the Old Bailey, came to an end yesterday, when the jury, after a 4 1/2-hour retirement found all 16 defendants guilty on a varying number of counts. Sentences will be pronounced to-day, thus bringing to a close the 6 1/2 weeks' hearing.

The jury retired at noon yesterday to consider verdicts dealing with at least 141 counts involved in 4 different fires, alleged to have been started by a "fire-raising gang."

Leopold Louis Harris, who is charged on 32 counts pleaded guilty to 25, including nine charges of arson. Judge Humphreys instructed the Jury to return a verdict of not guilty on the remaining seven charges. Five other defendants, including Louis Jarvis, pleaded guilty to 48 charges while 10 defendants pleaded not guilty to all charges against them.

A feature of Judge Humphreys' summing-up was his scathing attack on Capsoni, whom he described as a blackmailer and a highly dangerous criminal, though, he added, it was impossible to prosecute him. His chief regret was that he was unable to pass on Capsoni the sentence he so richly deserved.

The proceedings are estimated to have cost £50,000 the fees of one counsel alone, together with "refreshers," having amounted to £5,000. The cost of 200 witnesses has also to be met.—Reuter.

CLOSER UNION IN ISLANDS

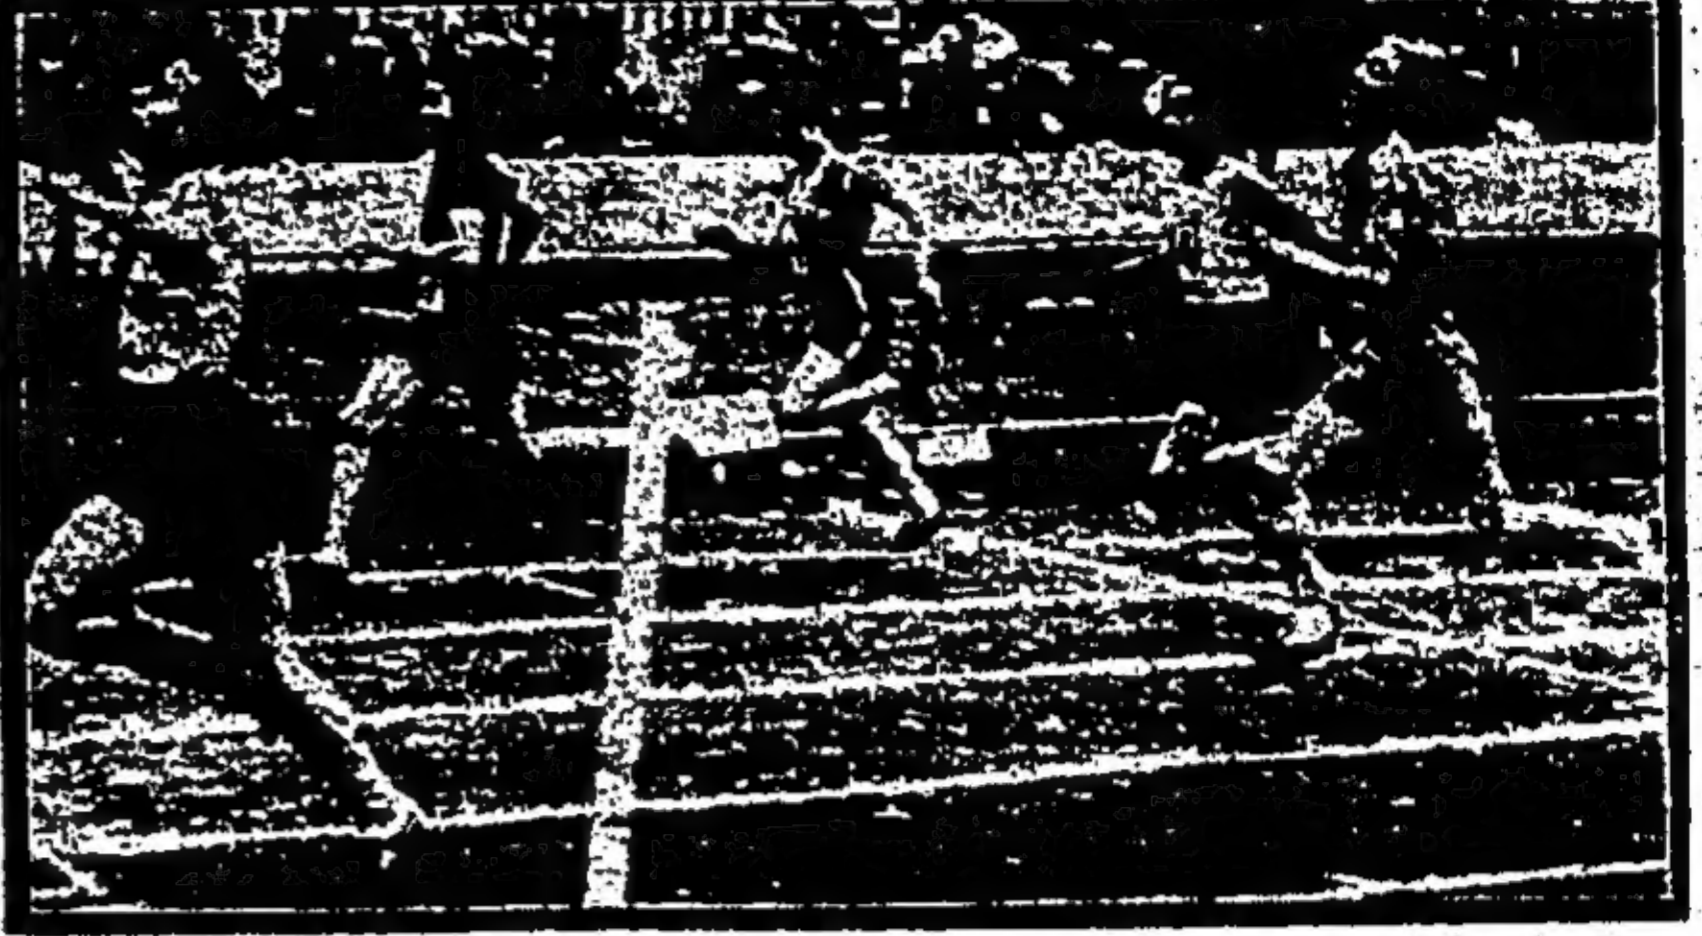

One Colony Of Leeward And Windward Is.

COMMISSION'S REPORT

London, To-day.

The report of the Commission consisting of General Sir Charles Ferguson, Chairman, Sir Charles Orr and Mr. MacNeill Campbell of the Colonial Office, which has been dealing with the question of a closer union of the Leeward Islands Windward-Island, Trinidad and Tobago, recommends that the Islands forming the Colonies of Leeward and Windward Islands should be united into one Colony, under a Governor, with headquarters at Saint Lucia.

The report states that whatever advantages may have accrued from the amalgamation of Tobago with Trinidad, the former has always been a financial burden to Trinidad, since the amalgamation, and Trinidad is strongly adverse to embarking on more experiments in the direction of a closer union with other islands.—British Wireless Service.

SLIGHT REACTION ON WALL ST.

Weakness In Grain Market.

SILVER FLUCTUATIONS

New York, To-day.

A slight reaction has followed Thursday's gains on Wall Street owing to complications in President Roosevelt's codes and the renewed weakness in the grain market.

Silver was purchased by commission houses at the opening of the session, while the trade sold. The scattered day's selling caused a decline, attracting bank and trade purchases. Considerable switching took place.

Industrials and rails dropped .88 and .53 to 98.32 and 48.55, while utilities and bonds declined .71 and .08 to 30.21 and 87.91. Business was fair, 2,090,000 shares being traded.—Reuter.

FOREIGN SHIPPING IN GERMANY

Restrictions To Be Withdrawn.

BRITISH PROTEST EFFECTIVE

London, To-day.

A conference took place yesterday at the Reich Ministry of Economics between German officials and representatives of foreign shipping companies in Germany, in reference to the recent order under German Foreign Exchange control regulations which had led the Companies to fear that discrimination would be practised in favour of German passenger steamship lines.

The conference was of an harmonious character and representatives of British shipping lines expressed satisfaction with the arrangement, which been devised to meet criticisms.

Berlin press reports state that the effect of this arrangement will be to remove restrictions on foreign shipping companies' activities.

An official announcement by the Ministry of Economics is to be made later.—British Wireless Service.

GRIM ALPS TRAGEDY

FOUR ETON MASTERS KILLED

One Victim's Brother In Far East.

PARTY SLIP DOWN GLACIER ON ROSEG PEAK

Pontresina, To-day.

A grim tragedy of the Alps, involving the deaths of four of Eton's most popular masters, one of whom has a brother at Weihaiwei, occurred near here, on Thursday last, when the party, who had made an assault on the treacherous slopes of Roség Peak, slipped over a precipice and fell several hundred feet into a chasm.

The discovery, yesterday by a guide, of an ice-axe and snow spectacles on the 13,000-foot Roség Peak in the Bernina Alps, was the first indication of the terrible tragedy which resulted in the deaths of three Eton house-masters, Mr. H. E. H. Howson, Mr. E. V. Slater and Mr. E. W. Powell and one assistant master, Mr. C. R. White-Thomson.

The bodies have not yet been recovered, but were seen hanging together at the foot of a dangerous precipice. They had evidently fallen several hundred feet.

The party, all of whom were expert climbers, left Samaden without guides on August 16 on what was intended to be their last expedition before returning to England.

They spent the night at Clerva Hut on the mountain-side, and climbed Roség Peak on Thursday, but apparently missed the way while descending and slipped on a glacier.

A rescue party was sent out immediately the guide reported the discovery of the bodies, but it was impossible to reach spot before to-day.

All four victims were very popular at Eton.

Mr. Powell is a well-known oarsman, having rowed in the Cambridge boat from 1906 to 1908. He also won the diamond sculls at Henley in 1912.

Mr. White-Thomson, a science master, is the eldest son of the Bishop of Ely.

Mr. Howson is a grandson of Dr. Hugh Butler, Master of the Trinity, while his brother commands a destroyer on the China Station.

None of the victims were married.—Reuter.

Mr. Howson is a brother of Commander J. M. Howson of H. M. S. Witch, of the 8th Destroyer Flotilla, which is at present at Weihaiwei. Commander Howson has been on the China Station for about four months.

WEEKLY TREASURY ISSUE.

$45,000,000 Allotted.

London, To-day.

Applications for tenders for Treasury bills yesterday totalled $69,125,000.

The amount allotted in bills at three months was $45,000,000.

The average rate per cent of the tenders accepted was 6/108d, compared with 5/5.10d last week.—British Wireless Service.

The WOMAN'S Page

POWDER BLENDING IS IMPORTANT.

How To Emphasise Regular Features.

CAMOUFLAGING LARGE NOSES

Is your nose too prominent? Then resort to face powder to correct the impression. Blend together some of your regular face powder and a little of some darker shade. Then apply this darker mixture to the nose. For the rest of the face, use your regular lighter powder.

During summer suntan season, this same rule applies—only, of course, with dark and darker powders used in the same way. That is, use a darker powder on the nose than on the rest of the face if your nose looks too large.

Perhaps in your private sizing up of your features, you have decided that your nose is so small that it might just as well not be there at all. But instead of discouragement, take up a little art.

If you are a blond, blend together flesh and white powder and use that on the face. But in order to emphasize your tiny nose, powder it with all white. This little trick will actually make your offending nose seem quite correct.

Brunettes with small noses should make a mixture of three-fourths white and one-fourth flesh powder for the nose and powder the rest of the face entirely with flesh.

Of course, one of the most successful ways to take attention away from a nose that may not be beautiful is to emphasize the appeal of the eyes. That does not mean that you should drench your eyes with mascara. It means that a carefully disguised eye make-up will improve your appearance generally.

ADVANCE MATERIAL PURCHASING.

Hints To Remember For Autumn.

Materials are at very low prices in the sales. Silks in particular are cheaper than they have ever been, and most attractive patterns in crepe de Chinese and chiffons are to be found. Owing to manufacturing difficulties there were some late deliveries, and sale customers have the advantage.

In buying materials ahead for the autumn it is well to remember that everything points to a big season for velvet, and that small-patterned velvet will be in fashion. Moire and taffeta are also to be worn in the autumn, owing to the growing ornateness of evening gowns; ottoman silk, shiny satin, and metal brocades are other materials which make good buying. There are many handsome metal brocades at less than half-price in the sales, and already the demand for them has been very great.

PINE-OIL FACE PACKS

The most convenient kind of rejuvenating treatment for the kind takes the form of a pine-smelling oil. Six drops, mixed in ordinary cold cream, are enough to act as a face pack without the bother of it.

Marlene's Influence On Beach Trousers

Have Matching Jackets In Wool Stockinette.

STRING IN FASHION

Beach trousers have not "gone up in smoke" as many people said they would when the beach skirt arrived. But they are changed. They have gone Marlene Dietrich. Much narrower, straighter, and much like a man's flannels. So if you like the trouser habit for the beach, take some along with you in your suitcase. You will not look out of date if the legs are narrow.

These new, straighter trousers have matching jackets. Perhaps they are still thinking of Marlene's suits. Wool stockinette is a popular material, and striped cotton shirts are matched up with the suits. These have the high neck fashion to which so many smart women have succumbed, Helen Hayes and Tilly Losch among others.

If you are not yet brave enough to wear black linen on the beach then you must have something string.

A belt, a beach bag, or a knitted string hat. String has come so far forward into fashion that it has gone into the weaving business, and now there are "staring materials."

LANVIN'S MUSICAL COMEDY SUITS.

Her Summer Outfits.

Lanvin's suits that look like the musical comedy pastiches of those picturesque fisher lads who come ashore to drape so marvelously every Saturday night at the port balls of Le Lavandou are the most amusing novelties in the pyjama line. There is one that has wide sailor trousers in pale beige jersey and a loose, flaring chartreuse green smock, buttoned part way down the front, with short, flappy cape sleeves.

Lanvin likes flowing, half-length wool capes, that tie on with a scarf collar at the throat, to slip on over these pyjamas when the sun goes down or under the clouds; they can also do duty as bathing capes.

Her new Summer-resort afternoon outfits remind us of the great pyjama epoch—nothing like them has been seen around these parts for some time. They are in heavy printed crepe, with long, flaring trousers, wing-sleeves and hiplength box jackets. With them are worn long mit sleeves and enormous, dressy, black straw hats, hinting at a certain formality.

REGULATING SUN EXPOSURE

Chanel is again going in for beach pyjamas. Some like her really boyish ones better than the slightly disconcerting unions of masculine pants and frilly tops. She has navy jersey one-piece that is just the thing for the Northern beaches. It is fastened with black buttons, like those on men's suits, placed on either side of a front panel that ends at the square décolletage. They conveniently permit one to regulate one's degree of exposure to a sun bath.

EXPRESSIVE HANDS IMPORTANT

Need Same Skin Tonic As Face.

RED HANDS SHOULD BE SCRUBBED.

Lovely hands are more than a mere beauty. They are an expression of personality, and a revelation of character. They tell you things that you might otherwise never know. That the shabby woman, in poor clothes, is of gentle birth; that the man doing a rough job of work is an artist, and that the young girl who seems so irresponsible is both capable and reliable.

A simple way of keeping hands in a good condition is to nourish them with the same skin food as that which is used on the face. Stroke it in gently, as though you were pulling on gloves, starting at the finger-tips and working up towards the wrists.

Quite a number of people suffer from red hands, and this is often due to bad circulation. Vigorous scrubbing with a nail brush or a good hard loofah will greatly improve matters. Stain and dirt caused by handwork or gardening can be removed by a cream which, spread on the nail brush, is used in the same way as soap.

Care In Washing

Care should be taken when washing the hands that the water is not too hot, and roughness can be avoided by rubbing in a soothing lotion immediately afterwards.

A good plan is to keep a bottle in readiness on the bathroom shelf. If the skin is at all dry a mixture containing almond oil is advisable, for this helps to prevent the skin from growing aged and wrinkled.

Almond oil, again, in plain form, is one of the best things for softening the cuticles. Put a little into a saucer and dip the fingers in before going to bed. Do this again in the morning, and then push the cuticles well back each time after washing during the day.

During the summer months some people find it difficult to keep their hands cool. A little eau-de-Cologne added to the water when washing is most refreshing, or if there is a tendency to dampness an effective remedy can be made by mixing together the following:—

- 2 drachms tannic acid.
- 1oz. glycerine.
- 2ozs. toilet alcohol.
- 3ozs. rosewater.

This should be applied to the palms twice a day.

MAIL REVIEW

"A WOMAN COMMANDS"—CENTRAL THEATRE.

"A Woman Commands," now showing at the Central Theatre, brings to the talkies the one-time idol of the movies, Pola Negri. In this picture, Miss Negri makes a successful and interesting comeback after three years of holiday in Europe.

She is seen as a dancer who refuses the advances of a dissolute King; but who eventually becomes his Queen and is the unconscious cause of a revolution which causes his death.

Pola Negri retains all her old attractiveness and proves herself the possessor of a beautiful voice. She sings the haunting melody, "Paradise," most effectively.

Roland Young plays the part of the King in a comedy vein, and H. B. Warner, Basil Rathbone and Anthony Bushall three other British actors, are included in the supporting cast.

MAIL REVIEW

"SMOKE LIGHTNING"—KING'S THEATRE.

"Smoke Lightning," now showing at the King's Theatre, has all the essentials of an old-time Western crowded into a breezy outdoor drama.

The features of the picture are thrilling gun-fights, brilliant riding by a posse of cow-punchers after a hectic dash from jail, a tense poker game in which one of the players is ruined, and a race between a horse and an express train.

The story, which was taken from Zane Grey's novel, "Canyon Walls," deals with the exciting experiences of a roving cowboy and his pal who decide to appoint themselves guardians of a little girl after the death of her father. The action, however, does not meet with the wishes of the sheriff, who covets the girl's ranch.

George O'Brien is the hero, supported by Nell O'Day, as an attractive "school-marm," and little Betty King Rose.

"TO-DAY WE LIVE"—QUEEN'S THEATRE.

The combined appearance of Joan Crawford and Gary Cooper in a story written by the brilliant American writer, William Faulkner, gives "To-day We Live," now showing at the Queen's Theatre, the reputation of being the most anticipated motion picture of the current cinema season.

Miss Crawford, who won great praise for her outstanding work in "Grand Hotel" and "Letty Lynton," is cast as a member of a British ambulance unit in the present picture, which is described as the experience of a woman and three men during the World War. Cooper, in the principal male lead as an American aviator, follows up his effective performance in "A Farewell to Arms," as Robert Young and Franchot Tone, lend effective support.

"NAGANA"—ORIENTAL THEATRE.

"Nagana," the African drama, which marks the debut of Tala Birell, exotic Viennese actress, is now showing at the Oriental Theatre.

The film gets its name from the African word for the dread sleeping sickness, and the story is concerned with the fight of a doctor against the disease in a native village in the wilds.

Melvyn Douglas and Tala Birell are well cast, but the plot is weak. Fine scenes of wild animals is the big drawing card.

MAIL REVIEW

"RONNY"—MAJESTIC

"Ronny," the French musical screen opera now showing at the Majestic Theatre is tuneful, lively, and entertaining. Kate von Nagy in the title role is delightful while her singing is one of the outstanding features of the picture. The continuity of the plot is smooth. The scene is laid in Ruitana and Ronny is mistaken for a noted singer whom Ruitana's officials believe they can use to divert the attention of the Prince of Perusa (Marie Dantzer) while they are looking the runs of the country. The music exceptionally good.

"INFERIOR" TYPES LESS SELFISH

"Moral Behaviour" Tests.

SPANISH DOCTOR'S FINDINGS

People of the so-called "inferior type" have better characters in at least one sense than the average of the population, the American Association for the Advancement of Science was told recently.

This conclusion was drawn from a study of "Moral Behaviour" reported by Dr. Emilio Mira, psychologist of Barcelona, Spain. One way in which he tested the "moral behaviour" of various classes of people was to not the percentage who voluntarily offered their blood for transfusion to aid the victim of an imaginary accident.

Results showed, said Dr. Mira, "that individuals composing what are usually considered to be the inferior grades of society possess a truer spirit of self-sacrifice than the higher; that is to say, that mental defectives, criminals, indigents and soldiers have furnished a higher percentage of those willing to offer their blood than the average of the population."

Tests made in a prison, he went on, provide "strong ground for suspecting that criminals of the murderer class have also a stronger spirit of self-sacrifice than thieves and swindlers. The conclusion which it would seem one is entitled to form is that those individuals generally considered to be the least adaptable socially, or the most anti-social, are precisely the ones most capable of doing disinterested actions, or shortly, the worse are also the best."

There is no such thing as "normal" moral conduct, added Dr. Mira.

It must have at least 4 clubs and these must be headed by the King and Queen, as North holds the Ace and it would be senseless to bid clubs except to show high honors and a biddable suit. War And Class War.

The British Labour Party has announced, with a flourish, that nearly eighty local Labour parties and representative organizations are contributing to the agenda of the party conference resolutions demanding effective measures to combat war and the menace of Fascism. The resolutions require the combined Labour movement—industrial, political, co-operative—"to reaffirm" its faith in democratic principles of government and to consolidate its strength for united action against all forces which seek to supersede democracy. For the Trade Union Congress five organizations have given notice of resolutions which call for vigorous action to safeguard Britain against the encroachments of what a Congress document describes as "one of the most murderous political cults the world has ever seen." Very good; and it may be hoped that the Labour Party, and the Trade Union Congress will sincerely and completely cleanse themselves from the contamination of the policies which these resolutions denounce. They will not do that without an effort, and the effort will be ineffective if it does not spring from a change in conviction. The Labour movement has from time to time expressed its abhorrence of international war—an abhorrence that is shared by the whole nation, although perhaps with differences of opinion upon the surest ways of promoting peace—but nevertheless the Labour movement persistently inculcates in its adherents the spirit of the class war, which is a compound of envy, malice, and uncharitableness. In its origin and in its common use "the class war" is a phrase of revolution; it signifies belief in the necessity for a violent overthrow of the existing order of society and readiness to employ violence for that end. The phrase has a Marxian connotation and no other, and the pacifists who would like to use it in a milder sense are passing on in this country. It must, in a weapon which was designed for exercise in what Mr. J. H. Thomas has repeatedly told Labour audiences would be "bloody revolution." Violent revolution is war—civil war; and those who denounce all war will denounce the doctrine and the policy and the propaganda that are concentrated in the phrase "the class war." Are the Labour Party and the Trades Union Congress sincere in their condemnation of war—all war—or are they only opposed to some forms of war? Likewise it may be asked whether the Labour movement is honestly opposed to all political dictatorships or only to some forms of dictatorship? This question is as pertinent as the other, not only because of events which have happened, and are continuing, on the Continent, but also because of Socialist policy which are being assiduously propagated in Britain by very prominent members of the Labour Party. The Labour Party denounces Hitlerism with unqualified vehemence. Yes; but does it denounce every sort of political dictatorship? The Hitler regime has been disgraced by tyrannical and murderous excesses which it may be hoped are abating after six months. But there is another dictatorship, established more than fifteen years ago, which has been responsible for atrocities immeasurably exceeding all that has happened in Germany. If the records of the Labour Party or of the Trades Union Congress contain a condemnation of the cruelties and oppressions of the Bolshevik dictatorship, let them point to it. The rise of Fascism in Italy and the recent development of Hitlerism in Germany are attributable in great part to reactions from (and imitations of) the practices, and the permutations of Bolshevism. The pendulum has swung the other way and to another form of dictatorship. But each of these forms of government is dictatorship, and, if dictatorship is to be denounced per se or because of accompanying outrages, then the Bolshevik Government ought to have been denounced ten times for every time the Hitler regime has been denounced. After fifteen years the Bolshevik rulers of Russia are sentencing "cookwreckers" to death. They profess to be bringing in an era of Socialism; and Socialism is the political creed of the Labour movement. Until now Socialism has so blinded British Labour that it has been unable to see evil in dictatorship that professed itself to be Socialist. Indeed Socialism has so blinded some of the leaders of British Labour to the evils and wrongs of dictatorship that they have been affirming, even during the period of the Hitler Government, that when Socialism attains to power in this country it must immediately establish a Dictatorship and its own dictatorship!

HERE, THERE

and EVERYWHERE

Reaction in Bagdad

Although Bagdad is commonly spoken of as a progressive town the forces of reaction in the "City of the Caliphs" are considerable. The clerical party is now campaigning against such Western innovations as horse racing, cabaret shows and the use of lipstick.

Similar protests have been made in various Middle Eastern countries. But the Arab is passionately addicted to racing and the theatre. Much of the popularity of the British was derived from their skill on ponies and their friendly rivalry with Arab riders.

The campaign is a sign that certain Bagdadis regard foreign influence in Iraq as still too strong.

Mexico In The Theatre

London playgoers know but little of Mexican entertainment, though at the Strand Theatre, where a Mexican revue was produced recently, a successful play called "The Man from Mexico" was seen more than 20 years ago. The flavour of that, however, was wholly European.

In a Mexican theatre, the custom seems to be for limelight men, in national costume, to carry on their work from the auditorium, where, on this occasion, the Mexican and Spanish colonies were well represented. The Mexican Minister was in a flag-draped box, and high combs and lace mantillas were to be fore.

Not one of the performers pronounced Mexico as we do. So in future, perhaps, suburban railway carriages bound citywards will re-echo with talk of "Meexhican" Eagles.

Paying For Seats On 'Change

Higher prices for seats on the New York Stock Exchange are a good indication of confidence in American security values. One seat has just been bought at a cost of $48,000, compared with $18,600 early last year. The record figure, $125,000, was paid during the great 1929 boom.

A seat on the New York Stock Exchange is a property which, like any other, can be bought and sold without formal regulations. In London the method is different. A new member here must pay an entrance fee of 600 guineas, an annual subscription of 100 guineas, provide three sureties each in £500, buy three shares and also a nomination.

These purchases cost him about £1100 at present. The cost of nominations varies according to the state of business.

Facts You Did Not Know.

In addition to detecting forged paintings with X rays and ultraviolet rays, scientists in Austria have found that the rays prevent paintings being damaged while being restored.

For rethreading damaged bolts a die has been invented made in two pieces hinged together that can be applied to the threads at some distance from the damaged place and then operated.

Programs for use in darkened theatres have been invented in England that are lettered in white on black backgrounds and read by holding them between the eyes and glare from footlights.

Utilizing the air currents set up by a car's motion, a new ventilating system for automobiles enables each passenger to have the comfort of fresh air without subjecting others to drafts.

ship of its own. This suggestion has been the chief contribution of the Socialist League to the policy of the Labour Party since it succeeded the J.L.P. as the party's pacemaker. The Labour Party has itself provided a test of its consistency, and sincerity. When it denounces war and dictatorship, does it exclude its own abandoned eighteen years ago.

GALLIPOLI REVISITED

Peaceful Battlefields that are Not Unlike the English Countryside

(By J. H. Walton.)

Kilid Bahr, Dardanelles.

In some parts of Europe international situations are tense; there is a resumption of sabre rattling; and rumours that a new war is not unlikely are being exploited by the sensational Press of a dozen countries. And at the same time lone pilgrimages are being undertaken to that most tragic of all fronts of the Great War, the Gallipoli Peninsula.

The rich come periodically, and the poor when they can, to visit the holy ground where their loved ones lie in perfect peace, heroes of the most gallant attempt in the world's history. Thousands of others must crave this satisfaction by travel, but have not the means at their disposal to come so far.

Absolute Peace

Let all such be assured at the outset that the graves of those who lie in the thirty-one cemeteries on the Peninsula are tended with a care and sincerity which it is impossible to exaggerate. Under that noble inscription, "Their Name Liveth For Evermore," 35,851 dead are commemorated. Absolute peace reigns on these battlefields, wherein areas are found astonishingly like oases of real English country side, in the once treacherous wastes of mountains and valleys, knolls and gulleys, studded with scrub and straggled pine.

Millions of flowers of innumerable varieties—dignified and aristocratic orchids alongside simple and modest buttercups and daisies—transform the battlefields into a rainbow of colour, and butterflies and bees busily go about their work undisturbed in this region which once was Hell.

The cemeteries themselves are of an amazing though simple beauty, and justly inspire pride that they are ours. In the making of them and the Chunuk Bair, Anzac (Lone Pine), and Helles Memorials thousands of tons of stone have been quarried twenty or thirty miles away north, on the European coast of the Dardanelles, brought by sailing boats round Cape Helles, and in the cases of Chunuk Bair and Anzac, which are 900 and 500 feet above sea level, drawn up by aerial ropeway.

Relics Of Battle

Despite the almost total absence of water in the immediate vicinity of the cemeteries, rosemary has been cultivated in abundance, and well-filled flower-beds flourish. Water has to be carried miles, and is distributed by primitive water carts, or in petrol tins carried on donkeys' backs.

The Imperial War Graves Commission deserve high and unstinted praise for the wonders wrought in the construction and upkeep of our cemeteries. Their work encounters untold difficulties, which none who have not visited the Peninsula can appreciate. For thirty-one cemeteries, miles apart, only twenty-eight workmen are at their disposal; yet nothing is neglected.

The Commissioner responsible for their care and upkeep is always ready to accompany visitors round the cemeteries and battlefields, and motor transport for visiting the Peninsula can be arranged through most of the tourist agencies. No motor-cars are to be found on the Peninsula without previous arrangement being made, but they can be shipped across from Chanak to Kilid Bahr at a few hours' notice.

These battlefields are in a better state of preservation as battlefields than those of any other front. Dugouts, saps, communication support, and front-line trenches still exist with striking realism, and through the astounding network of mining tunnels one can still climb, almost without interruption, from Shrapnel Valley, pass under Quinn's Post, and come out in No Man's Land. Right down from Chunuk Bair, past Battleship Hill, Baby 700, Russell's Top, Chessboard, Pope's Hill, Quinn's Post, Courtney's Post, Johnston's Jolly, Lone Pine, the Nek, Walker's Ridge, Mule Sap, into Shrapnel Valley, nothing is changed. On all sides there is plentiful evidence of military operations, and growth out of a dump of jam tins, are three new fruit-trees!

Going on to Helles one passes Krithia, which is in exactly the same state of ruin as when it was abandoned eighteen years ago.

The only inhabitants around here are gypsies, whom one sees periodically digging small holes all over the Peninsula. In each of these holes are invariably to be found the lead linings of s.a. ammunition boxes—empty. These gypsies have the amazing faculty of diving exactly where abandoned boxes lie buried, and by digging a hole no more than a yard in diameter they can be sure of unearthing the source of their livelihood—cartridge cases.

Soldier's Humour

In the cemeteries many grave-stones testify to that grim humour or self-sacrifice for which our troops were famous. "Here lies Bill, a sniping went; another sniper" saw him first, and Bill's day's work was finished. Or, "Don't worry about me, boys, look after Sergt. Smith."

At Maidsos, which was occupied by our forces during the Armistice period, the "Old Soldiers' Stores" is still preserved, with its attractive signs, painted with tar: "Buy your ridge and watches here; we swap anything for anything. Support the Old Firm." In Kilid Bahr there still exists another relic of war-time days—a Turk name Remzi, or Scotch Ramsay, as he now is proud to be known, who acts as general handyman to the I.W.G.C. Ramsay's English is somewhat limited, but, nevertheless he is the outstanding character of this old Genoese fort town.

Owing to his office as chairman of the Imperial War Graves Commission's launch, Ramsay considers it incumbent on him to accompany most visitors on their trips from Chanak, to and from the Peninsula, across the Dardanelles. These trips are made in antiquated, motor-driven contraptions which their owners are pleased to call motor-boats. And his presence is certainly reassuring, for the boat which was chartered for me was captained by a gentleman of by no means prepossessing appearance.

But a questioning glance at Ramsay brought me the loudly spoken assurance that, "Cp'n't man mad, Yes; little, Yes; but not too many, No." It was fortunate that Ramsay was aboard to steer, because the captain's boy, usually responsible for this task (the captain runs the engine), was completely occupied in continually pouring water down an enormous funnel, because, I discovered, the motor was not provided with a water circulating pump.

COCKTAIL HABIT CONDEMNED

Epicure's Attack On "Poison" Drink.

SPOILS THE APPETITE.

Paris. The advice of M.A. de Curnonsky, Prince of gastronomes, to those about to drink a cocktail is—don't! The famous epicure made a passionate attack on the cocktail habit during an amusing address to members and guests of the Office Français de la Gastronomie at the Salle Recamier.

The meeting was presided over by M. Leon Dourache, Director of the Office International du Vin and M. Escoffier, the 83-year-old veteran of the French cuisine.

"Nothing," said M. de Curnonsky, "gives me greater path than to see a sweet young girl absorbing this cocktail poison." The most disastrous Joan France ever made from America, he said, was the cocktail habit. America would never become a country of true gourmets until she abolished from the tables the "poisonous aperitifs" which spoil the appetite and deadened the palate.

Even the French traditional devotees of the art of eating were condemned by M. de Curnonsky for their fatal addition to high-powered aperitifs before meals.

"Such drinks," he added, "are industrial products—that is to say, they are not used on distillation of the grape, like wines and pure brandies. Drink nothing of the sort before eating and you will sit down to meat with a good appetite and a pure palate capable of enjoying good wine."—Benter.

FIGHTING THE CANCER SCOURGE

10th Report Of Empire Cancer Campaign.

LORD READING'S OPTIMISM.

London. Year by year the war against cancer goes on. The silent struggle waged by white-coated doctors and scientists in the hospitals and laboratories of many countries of the Empire never ceases.

How long it will be before victory at last rests with mankind, no one can say.

But the conclusion that the "front" in this anti-disease war is slowly being pushed forward is one that can be drawn from the tenth annual report of the British Empire Cancer Campaign.

There is a note of qualified optimism in the report for the year given by Lord Reading, Chairman of the Grand Council.

"Our knowledge of both the cause and treatment of cancer is increasing rapidly," he declares, "and great strides have been made since the inception of the campaign."

It is also cheering to hear that Lord Reading reports that, in spite of bad times, none of the important research work has been handicapped for want of money.

One of the most important matters dealt with in the tenth annual report is, of course, the experiment in the use of anti-serum in the treatment of cancer which its author, Dr. Thomas Lumsden, Honorary Director of the Cancer Research Laboratory at the London Hospital, describes as the "final and crucial test" to ten years of research.

Twenty-five cancer victims whose condition is hopeless from the point of view of existing methods have voluntarily placed themselves under the anti-serum treatment.

"It is not considered expedient at this early stage to publish even the provisional conclusions arrived at by the author and by the surgeons who attended the treated cases," Dr. Lumsden states.

He adds this significant comment:—

"It can only be said that the results are considered to justify further and intensive investigation along the lines of research referred to, and the Campaign has generously provided the funds to make the extension of the author's researches possible."

Lord Reading, too, speaks of these experiments in his report. "The results at present," he says, "are too few to afford any real grounds for assuming that this anti-serum will prove to be a substitute for the present methods of treating cancer or that it will really be effective."

"All that can be said is that the results so far have been encouraging and that at all events a temporary benefit has resulted in several of the cases treated."

"A great deal more work has still to be done before the treatment can be in any sense standardised or made available for general use."

Dr. Lumsden, in the dramatic story of his ten years' task, describes how in 1925 it was first shown that anti-sera could be produced which were capable of destroying cancer cells.

The first attempts to cure an animal by injecting the anti-serum failed, but by 1932 it was possible to record that mice could be cured in a large percentage of cases.

"The mice so cured were in future immune to cancer," he adds. "Some of these mice are still living and have now been free from recurrence for nearly a year, i.e. a period equivalent to something like 30 or 40 years in man."

"The results gradually but progressively attained, and all step by step confirming the hypothesis upon which ten years ago this research was based, made it justifiable and expedient at last to apply the final and crucial test and ascertain whether comparable results could be achieved in man or not."—Reuter.

MORAL DISARMAMENT NEEDED.

(By ALAN THOMAS.)

A number of distinguished savants from different countries have been conferring in Geneva under the Chairmanship of Professor Gilbert Murray. The Committee which brought them together is called the International Committee for Intellectual Co-operation, and one of the most important subjects under discussion has been the question of Moral Disarmament.

What is Moral Disarmament? It is not easy to define. It might be described shortly as an organised attempt to put an end to feelings of hostility between peoples by means of educating the public mind and trying to remove the prime causes of those feelings.

In the eighteenth century Rousseau wrote: "Man is born free and everywhere he is in chains." His words have an application for the twentieth century. To-day man is enchained with the fetters of Nationalism—nationalism in politics, nationalism even in everyday life!

The world's faith in internationalism, particularly in international conferences, has been badly shaken. The Disarmament Conference, having sat for 18 months without achieving any concrete result, has been adjourned till the middle of October. The Economic Conference, whose fortunes are still in the balance, will surprise most people if it registers more than a qualified success.

After what has happened in the Far East, confidence in the League itself is beginning to wane. Nations are tending more and more to "turn inwards"—to rely upon their own resources.

League an Illusion? What then? Has the effort "to promote international co-operation" failed? Is the League of Nations, which in 1919 was hailed as the greatest comfort of a desolate world, proving an illusion in 1933? If so, the gloomy conclusion must be drawn that human will and intelligence are not sufficient to devise the necessary guarantees of political and economic international order.

Speaking in the House of Commons on July 10, the Chancellor of the Exchequer said: "The idea that any country can be sufficient unto itself, that it can solve its own problems, without reference to what is happening to the rest of the world, is one that will not bear the light of experience."

His words ring true. The world, however, is what men choose to make it. And the reason why international conference do not achieve the results that are expected of them is that the delegates to those conferences are thinking all the time not what their respective countries can contribute to the problem, but what their respective countries can get out of the negotiations.

And why do they do this? Not because they themselves do not realise that the common interest is greater than the sectional interest, but because public opinion in their own countries has not yet learnt this truth. Nationalism in all countries is still stronger than internationalism.

Therein lies the importance of Professor Murray's meeting of savants.

TEN INJURED IN GALLERY CRASH.

Accident During Service In Old Mosque.

Belgrade. Ten men were seriously injured when the women's gallery in the 400-year-old mosque at Vlasentza, near Garajevo, collapsed during a service.

The men had been sitting immediately below the gallery, which was the only part of the mosque into which women were admitted.

The gallery was packed with women worshippers at the time, and sudden shrieks and cries, bricks began to fall and then the gallery collapsed. The women, however, all escaped with bruises and shock.—Reuter.

CONVICTS 10,000-MILE ADVENTURE

Escaped From Devil's Island.

FIVE YEARS AS BANDIT

Bordeaux.

A strange battle for freedom, which took him over 10,000 miles, has been related to his final captors by a convict who escaped from Devil's Island.

Victor Garder has arrived under close guard here all the way from French West Africa to be tried for a crime committed in Portugal four years ago.

Daring escapes into the "Green Hell" of South America and the jungles of French and Portuguese West Africa, five years of banditry, wandering 10,000 miles through three continents were described by the prisoner.

Condemned in France in 1928 to 20 years in French Guiana, for attempted murder, Garder escaped within a few months into the dangerous jungles known as the "Green Hell." After terrible hardships he reached civilisation living a hand to mouth existence in South America, finally working his passage to Portugal. There he carried out a sensational burglary of a smart Lisbon jeweller's shop. He was sentenced to eight years in the Portuguese penal camp at St. Paul of Loanda, in Angola. He escaped into the African jungle four days after his arrival.

Garder was caught again by the French police at Matadi, French West Africa, and promptly found means to escape once more. Cornered finally at Brazzaville, he has now been sent here to stand his trial for the jewel robbery at Lisbon, for which he has already been sentenced. But since a French citizen cannot be extradited from French territory, it appears that this is the only procedure by which he can be dealt with. A Bordeaux jury will therefore hear evidence about the crime committed in Lisbon.—Reuter.

$1,000 RESOLVES ON PEANUT.

Insurance Claim Fought In U.S.

Lincoln, Nebraska.

Upon a peanut hangs $1,000. Attorney for the executor of the estate of Mrs. Johnson contended that the peanut, lodged in her esophagus, led to her death and that her demise could be classified as accidental.

An insurance company contended that death was not accidental, within the meaning of the terms of an insurance policy.—Reuter.

FUNERAL OF LATE MR. G. G. CARTER.

Full Naval Honours Accorded.

Full Naval honours were accorded the late Mr. Gordon Geoffrey Carter, whose funeral took place yesterday afternoon at Happy Valley.

The coffin, which was draped in the Union Jack, was drawn from the Royal Navy Hospital to the burial ground on a gun-carriage by twenty ratings from H.M.S. Verity.

Six other men from the same ship acted as bearers, and at the graveside the "Last Post" was sounded by bugler Arggett of the Royal Marines.

The Rev. F. M. Chamberlain, Naval Chaplain, officiated.

Among those present were Lieut. Com. Brewer (H.M.S. Whitehall), Lieut. Swain (H.M.S. Verity), Lieut. Ashcroft (H.M.S. Wild Swan), Com. Eng. L. S. Rooker (H.M.S. Wishart), Gunner (T) W. J. Cooke (H.M.S. Whitehall), Mr. J. Hunter (representing the Hong Kong Australian Association), Mr. G. E. Budley (Anzac Coy., H.K.V.D.C.), Drs. J. E. Dorey and J. A. R. Selby, Rev. E. G. Powell, Messrs. J. Cassel, W. A. Hearn, A. W. Muir and J. Bentley.

Among the floral tributes were those from "His sorrowing mother and father," Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Wong; J. Cassel and P. M. Penhallick; Mr. and Mrs. J. Bentley; Mr. and Mrs. A. Kew; W. A. Hearn and E. F. Selk; Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Thompson.

To-day's Short Story.

THE WOMAN WHO WATCHED

By Adelaide Foster.

"THE world's coming to something," Bassanio exploded over the breakfast-table, "when women can get away with murder. That woman Peel has got off. Goes scot free. And will probably make a few thousands out of it. It's disgraceful—paying them to murder their husbands. That's what it amounts to. And this jury system—"

Words failed to appease his spleen. Mrs. Bassanio looked at her husband. She had looked at him a lot lately—in a brooding sort of way. Once there had been a soft, doglike devotion in her eyes. She said nothing.

He jerked: "I suppose you'd say she was justified?"

"Yes!" That maddened him. But Bassanio never showed his anger outwardly. His suave voice became a little more saccharine; his eyes a little narrower; his lips a little more cruel, almost imperceptibly so. Only his wife knew.

"You would! I suppose you think it is quite right to put arsenic in tea, eh?"

She did not answer. "Hate me—don't you?"

"No!"

"Ha, ha!" he laughed smoothly. "I don't hate you! Hate is fear—and I'm not afraid of you."

That was true and he knew it. He had been able to crush and break her because of the love she had for him, but, strangely enough, fear had found no place in her heart. Perhaps because she did not particularly care about anything—even living.

He slammed down his cup. "You'd better get up to the shop. Mrs. Crabtree is coming in at ten o'clock."

He went into the hall and the click of the door followed the click of golf sticks.

She watched him down the street. There had been an excuse, once, that playing golf enable one to meet people and thus get business. She laughed when she thought of it.

No, she didn't hate him. It had nothing to do with love or hate, this feeling. It went deeper than that. Right down in the depths of her, so ingrained that by now it had become something with which she breathed, slept, and lived, was a primitive desire for justice. People should pay for what they'd had—whether they dealt in merchandise or emotions.

ACCUSED SOLDIER DISCHARGED.

"Both Sides Lying," Says The Magistrate.

A charge against Pte. Joseph Patrick Hiley of the South Wales Borderers of assaulting the No. 1 coolie at St. John's Cathedral on July 19, was dismissed by Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Central Police Court yesterday.

The Magistrate remarked that both the complainant and the defendant were lying and he did not know what to make of it.

It was alleged that on the evening of July 19 Hiley was in the compound of the cathedral with a Chinese woman, when the coolie intervened. He tried to arrest her in Garden Road, but she went away after speaking to Hiley.

The coolie was returning to his quarters, he alleged, when Hiley and three other soldiers attacked him with their sticks. He blew his police whistle and all but Hiley fled.

An Indian and a Chinese constable arrived, but Hiley refused to be arrested, and ran into Murray Barracks.

NEW PLAY GROUND REGULATIONS.

For Use Of Children Under 13 Years.

His Excellency the Governor in Council has rescinded Regulation 10 of the regulations relating to the Children's Playgrounds in Kowloon, and has substituted the following regulation.

No male person over 13 years of age shall use any swing, spring, slide, or other appliance, erected in the playgrounds for the use and amusement of children, or any seat which is set apart for the use of women and children only.

This case of Mary Peel. She was glad the woman had got off. She had been led a dog's life. Everyone was talking about it. Mrs. Reeve, an old customer who brought her husband along to choose her hats, referred to it.

"Of course she did it," she said, "but—" she shrugged. Wallace Bassanio had returned and was lounging in the show-room. He joined in.

"It's disgraceful! Here we are having women murdering their husbands with impunity! They should have brought in a verdict of Guilty. If she killed the man she is guilty. People seem to take a very strange view of what is law and what isn't." He laughed his smooth laugh.

"Why, we husbands will never know when we are going to get a dose of arsenic in our food. The jury system is all wrong."

"She did it in self-defence! He was a cruel man!" A slight flush rose in Laura Bassanio's cheeks.

MONDAY'S STORY

Monday's story will be "The Patron," by Guy De Maupassant.

Cruel, she thought, in a way that ordinary, kindly people wouldn't understand. Such as being ignored for days on end, or openly humiliated until one's soul grew sick with a crushing sense of inferiority. Despaired—because one's overtaxed brain was too tired to trouble much over the economic condition of one's country, and care still less about the political quarrels of others. Goaded. Goaded to the verge of desperation by pin-point baiting that the years turned to dagger-thrusts. Yes, there were two kinds of cruelty.

Bassanio met the gaze of her brooding eyes, and suddenly a queer aversion gripped him. She had been doing it for weeks now. Staring at him with a flat stare which gave to her light eyes a curiously fixed expression, like the unwavering regard of a cat.

For the first time since he had married her he found himself wondering what she thought about. It was a new sensation—this awareness of his wife's personality. For so long he had regarded her as a nonentity that it came as something of a shock.

"It's an extraordinary thing that one can obtain arsenic so easily. Tell me, Mr. Reeve, why don't they tighten up the regulations concerning the sale of arsenic?"

"Well, that's rather difficult, Mrs. Bassanio. It's used in various preparations that have a perfectly legitimate use. Sheep-dip and weed-killer; even flypapers—all very easy to obtain. I remember a case, many years ago, of a woman who poisoned her husband with a solution made by steeping flypapers in water and mixing it with his food."

"Indeed!" Laura fixed her intent eyes upon him. "How very interesting."

"Interesting! I think it perfectly horrible."

"Well, I mean to say, Mrs. Reeve, interesting from a psychological point of view. The cause, in the first place, because there is always a cause, isn't there? Her voice became introspective. "I dare say quite a lot are never found out. With arsenic, for instance, as there is no taste."

"Oh, it's not so easy to get away with poisoning nowadays, Mrs. Bassanio. It's a lot art that died with the Borgias. Are you ready, my dear?"

"Still," insisted Laura doggedly, "blaming Mrs. Reeve, her handbag, there must be plenty who do get away with it."

"You don't know what you're talking about," said her husband contemptuously.

No doubt about it, there was something wrong with her. A dozen times a day he found himself glancing in her direction, only to realise afterwards, with a start, that she had been staring at him. It followed him about, that gaze, with an unwavering obliqueness. At first he had tried to appear unconscious of it. Then it irritated him. Gradually it began to get on his nerves.

The mixed Dutch-Italian blood of his father made him peculiarly susceptible to this strange imagery, which, insidious at first, finally enveloped him with a queer sense of unreality.

JAPANESE SWIMMER'S NEW RECORD

Makino Swims 1,000 Metres In 12.51.6.

OLYMPIC STARS TO SHATTER WORLD MARKS

Tokyo, Aug. 12. Shozo Makino, one of the Japanese swimming stars at the 1932 Olympic Games, broke another world record here to-day when he swam 1,000 meters freestyle at the opening of the national championships in 12 minutes 51.6 seconds.

Makino was the outstanding star of the trials, opening the three-day meet at which other records are expected to fall.

He made his record time for the 1,000 meters in the trials for the 1,500 meters event, which he finished in 19 minutes 20.4 seconds. Previously he won a heat of the 400-meter freestyle in 4 minutes 47.6 seconds.

Other outstanding performances were by Kusuo Kitamura and Masanori Yusa. The former, now only 16 years old, did the 400-meter freestyle in 5:59.6 while Yusa swam the 100 meters freestyle in 53 minutes flat and the 200 meters freestyle in 2 minutes 13.6 seconds.

Only trials were staged tonight. Sunday the semi-finals are scheduled and Monday the finals. The meet is being held in the famous Meiji Shrine pool before big crowds.

Kitamura's and Yusa's performances threatened but did not exceed existing records.

World marks bettered in Japan recently, prior to the national meet, are:

200-meter breaststroke, in which Reizo Koike clipped four-tenths of a second off Walter Spence's old record of 2 minutes 44.6 seconds.

800-metre freestyle, in which Makino, a veteran though only 19 years old, did the distance in 10 minutes 8.6 seconds to slice seven seconds off the record held by Jean Tardis of France.

400-metre freestyle, in which Kitamura achieved a mark of 4 minutes 46.6 seconds, shaving four-tenths of a second off another of Tardis' marks.

These three were all members of the Los Angeles Olympic delegation. This year Kitamura has been concentrating on the shorter distance, leaving the long race of 1,500 metres to Makino who has been threatening both Kitamura's Olympic record and Arne Borg's six-year-old world figure of 19:07.2.—Associated Press.

Three More Records Shattered.

Aokyo, Aug. 14. Three more swimming records were established yesterday by members of the Japanese team who went to the Olympic Games at Los Angeles.

In the semi-final of the 200 metres free style, Seiken Yusa, a member of the relay team, established a new world record of 2 min. 13.4 sec. Although slightly behind the world record of 19 min. 7.2 sec. held by Arne Borge of Sweden, K. Kitamura, of the Kochi Higher Commercial School, and S. Makino, of the Waseda University, broke the previous Japanese record for the 1,500 metres free style event by covering the distance in 19 min. 8 sec. and 19 min. 22.3 sec., respectively. The pair were first and second in the same event. Kitamura covered 1,000 metres in 12 min. 42.6 sec., while Makino swam in 12 min. 46 sec. Both are new world records, having broken the former record of 12 min. 44 sec., held by Kitamura.—United Press.

OFFICIAL PARTY SEE SURFBOARDING

L.G.P.'S VISIT TO V.R.C. YESTERDAY

Safety Demonstrations Performed Well.

COMPETITORS' LAST WORK-OUT FOR REGATTA TO-MORROW (By G. L.)

An official party, including the Inspector General of Police, the Hon. Mr. E. D. C. Wolfe, Mr. E. I. Wynne-Jones, Police Magistrate, Mr. T. H. King, Deputy Inspector General of Police and Chief Inspector Marks, visited the Victoria Recreation Club yesterday evening for the purpose of watching the local surfboard aspirants at practice.

It is understood that the Inspector-General of Police expressed his approval of the sport, and commented on the skill of the surfers.

Mr. Wynne-Jones, was also very enthusiastic regarding surfboard riding.

Safety Demonstration
A demonstration by Messrs. Butt and Tanner was carried out before the official party to prove the safety of the surfboards while travelling at full speed. Both

RUBBER BUFFERS ON SURFBOARDS
It is understood that the Hon. Mr. E. D. C. Wolfe, C.M.G., has mentioned that thick rubber buffers should be placed over the sharp end of the surfboards when in use at the beaches. He will, however, permit these to be discarded, during the Regatta to-morrow.

riders approached the boathouse granite wall at full speed from a distance of over 100 yards and when within about one yard of the wall they sat upright, causing the surfboard to stop within a foot of the granite wall.

Approaching Swimmers
Another demonstration was made with the assistance of Mr. S. MacNider who acted as a swimmer unaware of an approaching surfboard. Two riders, Messrs. Butt and Tanner, hurried themselves straight at the swimmer and when within a yard, repeated their capabilities by pulling-up within a foot of their objective.

Last Work-Out
The competitors for to-morrow's Regatta also put in their last work-out, before the race-day. Messrs. Butt and L. A. Soares did two long trips over a half a mile, and returned to practice starting for the 100 yards race. A number of lady competitors were also seen in action, getting-in the last bit of practice.

"Y" Trip Cancelled.

The visit of the Y. M. C. A. swimming team to Canton this week-end has been postponed owing to unforeseen circumstances in Canton.

THE GAME CORBALLÓ

A new ball game, which has already swept across the Continent on a wave of enthusiasm, has now made its appearance in England, and it is believed that it will meet with equal success. The name of it is Corballó, and the players use a basket-like object to catch and throw the ball.

Rules for playing. Corballó are extremely elastic, for it may be played either as singles, or as a team game with two, three, four, or five people on each side. It is played on a court divided across the centre by a rope suspended 6 ft. from the ground. The ball is thrown across it from one player to

200 METRES MIXED RELAY AT C.A.A. GALA

V.R.C. Enter Strong Team For To-night.

SQUADRON-COMMANDER TANG YUET MING TO BE PRESENT (By CRAWL.)

The third monthly swimming gala of the Chinese Athletic Association takes place to-night at their North Point Bathing shed, commencing at 8 p.m.

A wide and varied programme has been arranged and the gala will be specially honoured by the attendance of Squadron Commander Tang Yuet-ming, who has kindly donated the prizes for the events.

The feature of to-night's programme will be the 200 Metres Mixed Relay which has so far drawn a number of entries from Clubs including the Victoria Recreation Club, who have a strong team in Mrs. P. McMahon, Miss Doris Hunt, W. Lawrence and E. B. da Rosa.

Another featured event will be the 200 Metres Club Championship which is expected to draw a large entry.

In the exhibition diving, Ed. da Rosa, the Colony and V.R.C. Champion will be participating.

A water-polo game between Married and Single members of the Chinese Athletic Club will conclude the gala. Mrs. Tang Yuet-ming, wife of the Squadron Commander will start the water-polo game by throwing the ball in.

The following is the full programme:—
200 Metres Mixed Invitation Team Race.

Ladies' 100 Metres Free Style
Men's 200 Metres Free Style Championship
Ladies' 75 Metres Three Styles
Children (Under 12) 50 Metres Free Style

Men's 100 Metres Breast Stroke
Men's Inter-Department Relay
Men's 50 Metres Blindfold Race
Men's 50 Metres Obstacle Race
Men's 50 Metres Back Stroke

the other, and if it falls to the ground the player who has failed to catch it loses a point. The court can vary in length from 18 yd. to 26 yd., according to the number of players. If a court is not available, then good practice may be obtained by throwing the ball against a wall or strong board.

This game will find favour with the energetically-inclined, for the book of instructions states very emphatically that "the game should be played as fast as possible." One rule which has to be observed is that the ball may not be touched by hand during play, and if it falls to the ground, it must be picked up with the basket-like racket.

"SPIDER" PLADNER WINS CHINA TITLE

Hashimoto Knocked Out In Seventh Round

Shanghai, August 11. Flooring Hashimoto with a short right to the jaw for a count of eight in the eighth canto, Emilio "Spider" Pladner, former world's flyweight champion, last night annexed the featherweight championship of the Orient at the Candrome when he finished off the Japanese contender 10 seconds later with a volley from both hands to the head and jaw.

The knock out came as a surprise, as Hashimoto had had fought pluckily up to the seventh round, and had given Pladner just as much as he received himself.

SWIMMING HINTS

Water Romps That Serve A Purpose

By Sid. G. Hedges

It is not necessary that all the time of your bathes shall be taken up with serious swimming and diving study. Bathing would lose half its delights if it were so solemn a business. When you have a few friends with you, there are plenty of games and romps which you can enjoy, which are not only good fun in themselves, but which will definitely improve your watermanship and general swimming ability.

Try the following:—

Four or six players should take part in this. They tread the water one behind the other, or better still, support themselves vertically by sculling—their legs being spread wide apart. Then the last person plunges down and swims along through the tunnel of legs, rising to the surface and taking his place at the head of the line. And so the game goes on.

Tag In The Water

Few games are better known on land than "Tag," but it is even more fun in the water. "It" chases his fellows until he succeeds in touching one of them, who then becomes "It."

Here is another land game which goes very well in the water. A good, imaginative leader can take his followers through deep and shallow, performing all sorts of stunts as he goes. Dives and jumps from the bank can vary the water work.

"Leapfrog" can also be played in the water. Two or more are needed for this, and it can be played either in deep or shallow. In the shallow it is played exactly as on land. But in the deep, those in front have to tread water to "make their backs"; the rear player then makes his leap by putting his hands on the other's shoulders and thrusting downwards and backwards.

Mind The Shark

This is good fun across a swimming bath. One player stands and treads water in the middle—he is the shark. The others line the bank. When the word is given, all of them must jump or dive in and try to get to the other side without being touched by the "shark." Under-water swimming is of considerable use in dodging. Each player who is caught stays in the middle and helps catch the test. Alternatively, the one caught takes the place of the original shark.

Seal Hunting
In this game, one person is the seal, and he is allowed to swim as he likes. All the hunters, however, have each to use one arm only, the other being held behind the back. When one of the hunters catches the seal, the two change places.

Helsingfors, Aug. 10. It is understood that Paavo Nurmi (above) intends to run as a professional and that he will challenge the French long-distance runner, Jules Ladoumeque, in September.—Trans-Ocean Kuo Min.

NANKING STADIUM'S DEDICATION

Athletic Meeting On National Day.

Considerable interest has been aroused by the elaborate preparations being made by the Government for the opening of the National Stadium in Nanking on October 10, the National Day of China.

The inaugural meeting, delayed by political unrest during the last two years, promises to be one of the chief events in China's sports annals.

According to the tentative plans of the committee making preparations, the meeting will last ten days, during which China's representatives at the forthcoming Far Eastern Olympiad will be selected.

The stadium was built about two years ago, and its renovation is expected to be completed by the middle of September.

According to the estimates of the committee, the expenses for the ten days will amount to $50,000. The estimated admission receipts are $27,000.

GERMANY FLIES ALONE IN AIR RACE

Home Engines To Be Used

Berlin, Aug. 11. The organising committee of the all-round Germany air race, in which 150 aeroplanes will take part, has acceded to the wishes expressed by many Germans that only machines equipped with German motors shall be allowed to participate. Machines with foreign motors and which already have been entered accordingly have been struck off the list of starters.—Trans-Ocean Kuo Min.

CRICKET PEACE SOUGHT

The Personal Touch Required.

JARDINE'S IDEAL SKIPPER FOR AUSTRALIA

London, July 26. A strong plea that the M.C.C. and the responsible cricket authorities of Australia should be allowed to settle without interference the controversy which has arisen over the recent Test matches was made in London on Wednesday by Mr. Stanley Bruce, the Resident Minister for Australia here. He was speaking at a complimentary dinner given by the M.C.C. to Mr. D. R. Jardine and the M.C.C. Australasian team.

It was no use pretending that the matter was an unimportant one, said Mr. Bruce, because great feeling had undoubtedly been engendered, not by irresponsible persons, or by barrackers, but deep-thinking, serious people with a great regard for cricket. "Whatever has to be done to restore cricket, whatever is necessary to straighten out the trouble, do it by personal contact for God's sake; not by exchanging notes, but by coming face to face."

Jardine, in a brief speech, deplored that anything had occurred in the Test Matches which set the wrong tempo, but added, slyly, that a prescription for the perfect captain of England in Australia would read something like this:

"A man so various that he seemed to be not one but all mankind's epitome, stiff in opinions, always in the wrong."

It fell to his lot, he concluded, to reply for seventeen of the best fellows with whom he had ever been associated, and, in spite of losing the toss four times out of five, he regarded himself as the luckiest captain who had ever taken a side out to Australia.

CARNERA WILL CALL THE TUNE

World Championship In Rome.

AMERICANS MUST WAIT

New York, Aug. 12.

Primo Camera will defend the heavyweight boxing championship of the world, for the first time, against Paulino Uzcudun, at Rome, in October, according to his manager, Louis Soresi.—Reuter.

Uzcudun Or McCorkindale New York, Earlier.

Rome and not New York will be the world's boxing capital while Primo Camera holds the heavyweight title, it was announced here, to-night on behalf of the champion, and the first title bout will be with the British boxer, Don McCorkindale, or Paulino Uzcudun, of Spain. With the heavyweight title in Italy, bigger gates can be assured than New York can offer, Mr. Louis Soresi, Camera's manager, said.

He also declared that there was no reason why American second-rate boxers should have the first chance at the title and he believed that the British and Spanish contenders have a chance.

He said financial success is assured the boxer who rises above the level of mediocrity in the United States. Americans will have their chance later.

Camera proposes to have his first title bout on October 22, in Rome, and he will make his choice between McCorkindale and Uzcudun very shortly.—United Press.

Paulino's Chance

If Paulino gets the assignment he can work off part of his cry about not getting a fair break in the United States.

After a thoroughly unsuccessful season in the United States in 1932, in which he lost to King Levinsky, Mickey Walker and the late Ernie Schaaf, the Big Baque went home and said he didn't get a fair break.

He showed he could still win when he won from Salvador Ruggerillo in Madrid February 8, 1933.

McCorkindale was considered even a less threatening opponent than Uzcudun.—United Press.

MISS ENGLAND III'S CHALLENGE

Pilot And Mechanics Sail For America.

RACE NEXT MONTH

London, Aug. 12.

The seven mechanics who have been employed in the construction of his new motor-boat, Miss England III, accompanied Mr. Hubert Scott-Paine when he sailed for the United States; to-day, in an endeavour to capture the Harmsworth international motor-boat trophy.

Miss England III will be opposed to Commander Gar Wood's Miss America X. The contest will be held on the St. Clair river, Detroit, Michigan, on September 2, 4, and 5.

Mr. Scott-Paine stated, just before he left, that he intended to attack the world record on Southampton water next spring. Miss England III, which cost $22,000, is made of steel and resembles the fuselage of a Schneider Trophy seaplane rather than a motor-boat. The driver and mechanic sit in a small cockpit.—Reuter.

FOOD AND HOME ECONOMICS

Peanut Butter And Milk Used For Food Value

Recipes Given For All Members Of Family; Pudding Is Described.

The menus for to-day rely on eggs and peanut butter for their protein for the adult members of the family while milk adds to the nourishment of the children's diet. Whole wheat bread also increases the food value of the meals.

Recipes.

The recipes given will serve a family of six.

Hot Stuffed Eggs.

Five eggs—hard cooked, 1-2 teaspoon minced onion, 1 teaspoon vinegar or tomato juice, 1-4 teaspoon salt, pinch pepper.

Cut the eggs in half lengthwise, removing the yolks. Mash the yolks thoroughly, mix with the other ingredients. Stuff the egg white. Put in a dish, cover with tomato sauce, reheat in a slow oven and serve. A white sauce may be used instead of tomato sauce.

Tomato Sauce.

One cup tomatoes, 1-4 cup water, 1 teaspoon sugar, 1 tablespoon fat, 2 tablespoons flour, 1-4 small onion chopped fine, 1-2 teaspoon salt. Cook tomatoes, onion, sugar, water and salt together for five minutes. Rub through a coarse sieve. Melt fat, add flour and blend thoroughly. Add tomato mixture slowly, stirring constantly. Cook until it thickens. Note: For a white sauce use milk instead of the tomato mixture.

To Preserve Colour

A few drops of red vegetable colouring in your strawberry pie will preserve the bright hue of the berries. Use it in crushed berries too for strawberry shortcake.

FOR TENDER BEEF.

After serving a hot joint of boiled beef put it back for an hour or so in the water in which it was boiled. It will be much more tender than if put away dry.

FOR BETTER BOILED PUDDINGS

When boiling or steaming a pudding put a small wire cake-stand in the saucepan and rest the basin on it.

Leftovers Made Delicious With Latest Recipes

Dash Of Imagination Added To More Hash Makes Meal For Two.

Leftovers—all dressed up for the luncheon or dinner parade—and no one will ever know! Leftovers—dabs of this and dabs of that—shall they be thrown out? Leftovers with imagination added make a dish de luxe. Try these.

This wish will be particularly adaptable to the twosome families, so if there are more of you make additions accordingly.

Hash, Creole Style.

1 slice onion
1/4 green or red pepper
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup cooked meat, cubed
3/4 cup cold boiled potatoes in cubes

1/2 cup of broth (made with a bouillon cube)
1/4 cup of tomato puree
Salt as needed

Chop the onion and pepper very fine. Melt the butter in a hot frying pan and in it cook the onion and pepper until they are softened. Add the meat and potato, mix thoroughly. Add broth and puree. Mix again and set in a hot oven to heat for about 10 minutes.

Ham With Boiled Apples.

Melt half a tumbler of currant jelly in a saucepan, set over boiling water; lay in it some thin slices of cold, boiled ham and cover closely to become hot. In the meanwhile core two apples, pare and cut them in rings half an inch thick. Place them in a hot broiler which has been greased with some of the ham fat. Cook apples about three minutes on each side, or until apple is softened throughout. Make a border of the apple rings around the heated ham, surrounding the entire dish with a border of brown steamed rice.

This is an excellent base for a jellied vegetable salad in which all the little dabs of vegetables may be used:

1 package lemon jelly, 1 cup hot water, 3 to 4 tablespoons vinegar and cold water to make a cup, 1/2 teaspoon salt. Dissolve jelly in hot water, and vinegar and cold water and salt. Chill. When slightly thickened fold in desired vegetables. Turn into a mold.

These combination vegetables in the proportion of one to two cups are sufficient for the above jelly mixture. If there are just two of you cut this recipe in quarters.

Grated raw carrot, cabbage and green pepper.

Cabbage, celery, green pepper. Cabbage, celery, and pickles. Carrots, green peas and beans. Peas, celery and cabbage.

When you get your fresh vegetables, hold out some of each

WASHING CHAMOIS GLOVES

A Helpful Hint.

Certain pairs of Chamols are quite soft after washing, but others perlat in drying stiffly, and no amount of rubbing will soften them.

Chamois gloves should be soaked in a warm (not hot) lather of soap flakes, then squeezed about in it. If there are any specially bad marks draw the gloves on to the hands and rub against one another. Rinse in two more soapy lathers, and, if the gloves have turned out stiffly before, add to the last soapy rinsing, water a tablespoonful of olive oil.

Press in a towel and hang to dry in the open air or a warm room, but not before a fire or in any fierce heat. When dry, rub vigorously against the hands to remove any stiffness, and draw gently on to the hands before putting the gloves away. Do not use glove stretchers, as these are liable to split the seams.

HEAT SPOILS ELECTRIC FITTINGS

When installing a point for an electric iron don't have the point too near the stove, as the heat and moisture from cooking are detrimental to the fittings.

2 hard cooked eggs, diced
1/2 cup cooked peas
1/2 cup diced celery
1 tablespoon chopped onions
1 tablespoon chopped green pepper
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon paprika
4 tablespoons salad dressing

to make an old-fashioned vegetable soup.

1 quart soup stock (or make the stock with bouillon cubes), 3/4 cup potatoes, diced; 1/4 cup fresh peas, 3/4 cup carrots cut in thin strips, 1/2 cup celery cut in strips, 3/4 cup canned tomatoes, 1 small onion, sliced, salt and pepper, 1 tablespoon parsley, finely chopped. Heat stock, add vegetables and seasonings, and cook gently until vegetables are tender. Add chopped parsley and serve.

Potato Salad.
1 cup diced cooked potatoes
1 hard cooked egg, diced
1/3 cup diced cucumbers
1/4 cup diced celery
1 tablespoon chopped onion
1 tablespoon chopped pimiento
1/4 teaspoon paprika
1/3 teaspoon salt
1/3 cup salad dressing
Mix and chill ingredients and serve on lettuce leaves.

LEMON CRESCENTS

Take 4oz flour, 4oz ground rice, 4oz butter, and 4oz sugar. Rub the butter into the other ingredients till it is a fine crumbly mass. Add the grated rind of a lemon, and mix stiffly with an egg. Roll out thinly and cut into crescent shapes. Bake about fifteen minutes in a cool oven.

MAYONNAISE WHICH WILL KEEP.

This mayonnaise will keep for weeks and may be used for sandwiches, salads and even in place of mustard with cold meat.

One tablespoon butter, 1 dessert-spoon mustard, 2 tablespoons sugar, 5 tablespoons milk. 2 tablespoons vinegar, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1 egg. Put butter, sugar, mustard and salt in a basin or small saucepan standing in a larger saucepan of boiling water. When melted, mix well, then add beaten egg and milk and lastly vinegar very slowly. Place on stove and leave until it thickens, stirring occasionally. Keep in a cool place in an airtight jar.

His reaction took the form of a malicious provoking; a deliberate attempt to enrage the woman who sat wrapped in a cloak of watchfulness. Her stolid indifference served but to turn the tide of his anger against himself. Instead of enraging her, he began to lose that control which had given to his temper the edge of fine steel. The Philippine smoothness with which he twisted words gave place to a spiteful venom, which in turn deteriorated into abuse.

By some uncanny process of communication the woman who watched sensed the change, and knew that the thing which he had failed to arouse in her was striking at the very roots of his imagination. Of what was he afraid? Her? The thing he had brow-beaten for so long? She gave a harsh little laugh when she thought of it.

The summer, hot and sultry, was going out in a blaze of heat. Bassanio thought it would be a good thing when it was over and the cold nip of autumn braced the air. This feeling of lassitude he had never before experienced had worried him not a little. Once, after an afternoon's golf, he felt so distressingly tired that he decided to go home instead of returning to the clubhouse for the usual game of poker.

Letting himself into the house, he went straight through to the kitchen, where he usually cleaned his golf-clubs. His wife was there untying a parcel upon the kitchen table. Bassanio glanced at it casually, and saw what looked like a lot of small rolls of white paper.

"What are they? He picked one up.

"Fly-papers!" she answered indifferently. "There seems to be a plague of the beastly things, and they bite and irritate."

Bassanio turned away, the question and answer already shrouded in triviality. But his wife was speaking again, and even as he turned a dreadful sense of apprehension crept through his mind, gradually merging into a rather grotesque horror.

"Fancy," she was saying, "it never occurred to me that flies were poisoned when they touched this paper. I thought they just struck to it, couldn't get away, and—well—just died off. But now I know there is arsenic in this sticky stuff."

She touched one of the papers and it clung to her fingers. "Rather horrible, isn't it?"

"I won't have them in the house!" He almost shouted the words in a vain endeavour to sheer off the incredible thing which had entered his mind.

"What?" For a moment a faint astonishment ruffled the stillness of her eyes. "Oh, they are not for here. I am taking them to the work-room."

"I won't have them! Do you hear?" His voice rose. With a sudden movement he swept the parcel into the empty grate and, striking a match, put it to the papers.

Something had been clamouring for admission to his mind—a remembrance. POISON! The word blazed a smouldering trail of thought. For some reason or another she was always talking about poisons. Arsenic! And watching him with her expressionless eyes.

His practicality approached the terrifying thought, slid off it, and finally gripped it. Why had she bought those fly-papers?

Conscious that something outside his ordinary self was pushing his mind towards discovery, almost like an internal voice directing him, he thought: "She is trying to poison me!"

This feeling of physical fatigue which seemed, lately, to have crept into every corner of his usually vigorous personality—Another woman who, long ago, had poisoned her husband with a solution obtained from fly-papers steeped in water.

It came swiftly, yet with an amazing kind of violence that swamped him with utter conviction. He was being poisoned!

He went to see his doctor, describing his symptoms but keeping back the gnawing suspicion which had prompted the visit.

"Any sickness at all?" asked the doctor, sounding his heart.

"No," said Bassanio, and wondered whether he had felt sick and not noticed it. "No, I don't think so."

The doctor pounded his stomach. "Any pain there?"

"Yes," Bassanio was suddenly conscious that he had a pain in his stomach. That he had had several pains. Little gripping pains that passed off after a while. "Yes," he said, described them. "I have."

He began to feel a little sick. "Well," the doctor put aside his instruments, "there's nothing really wrong with you. You're a bit run-down and the appendix is a bit touchy. Nothing to worry about."

Attention to your diet will rectify that. No fruit containing pipes, plenty of green vegetables, and take this tonic. You'll soon be all right."

Bassanio walked home. The doctor was a dunder-headed fool. He was being poisoned. Slowly poisoned.

He paid a visit to the public library and read all the books it contained dealing with poisons. He learned, among other things, that arsenic could be administered in such minute doses that it escaped detection until after the death of the victim, and then only if a post-mortem were made, when it would be found to have deposited itself in the organs, hair and finger-nails.

He came away more than ever convinced that he was being poisoned. And he could do nothing, prove nothing. Because, with a devilish cunning he would never have believed she possessed, she had managed to find this out. Slowly. Inch by inch. And only after he was dead would it be discovered. It might never be discovered at all.

He told her he needed a holiday, and drawing out of the bank most of the money which stood to the credit of their small business, he went away.

Soon he began to feel better. The tiredness went from his limbs and the nausea—yes, he had undoubtedly felt sick—from his stomach. He played golf with all his old-time zest, and went for a swim in the sea every morning. The evening passed very pleasantly in playing bridge and poker. And he was eating like an ox.

But after a while his cheques began to come back marked, "Refer to drawer." He couldn't understand it, and wrote to his wife asking for an explanation.

In her reply she pointed out that as she had never been allowed to handle any money in the business and knew nothing about making up bank-books, she was putting the cheques as they arrived in payment of bills into a drawer in the desk.

If he wanted money, she said, he had better come back and see to it. She had had to rely on cash orders.

Bassanio went back. He intended to stay in the house for that one night only, and the next day remove his things for good. Then he would see about a separation. He was not going to stay there to be poisoned. He left his trunk in the hall and went to the shop. It was closing time. Mrs. Bassanio, he was informed, had left a few minutes before.

He found the cheques pushed into the back of a drawer and endorsed them, ready to pay into the bank, first thing in the morning. Then he went home.

The house stood alone on the outskirts of the town. As he approached he saw a light shining from the dining-room window which overlooked the front garden. The gate stood open, and he walked up the path. His rubber-soled shoes made no noise upon the tiled surface.

The interior of the room was plainly visible from the outside, and he noticed that the table was laid for the evening meal. Laura was standing beside it. As he passed beneath the window a movement attracted his attention. The next moment his heart gave a thud against his ribs.

In her hand she held a slip of white paper and, as he gazed, fascinated, he saw her shake something from it over a plate of food. His eyes narrowed, as he remembered the trunk he had left standing in the hall. She knew that he was back.

Now he was certain. And something very like panic struggled with the black rage in his breast, as he flung open the front door. She came to the threshold of the room.

"Is that you, Wallace?"

"It is!" He strode along, past her, upstairs to his room, marvelling at her duplicity.

"Dinner is ready," she called him, indifferently.

He shut the door and sat on the edge of the bed. So the fool thought she could get rid of him as easily as all that, did she? No doubt it was arsenic she had sprinkled upon the plate. Arsenic—which had no taste. A white powder which gave no warning to the victim, only an agonising oblivion.

The Woman Who Watched

He shuddered at the thought of the horrible physical anguish which preceded it.

He heard her come upstairs and enter her room. The plop of the gas-fire being lit and the drawing of a chair towards it told him she was remaining there. Softly he left the room and, searching downstairs, discovered a crumpled white paper at the back of the fireplace. Careless! They nearly all made a mistake somewhere.

He put it carefully in his pocket, wondering. For a long time he sat, discarding one plan after another. Finally he decided to go to bed. Perhaps there some methods of getting even would occur to him. The indifference and contempt of years had changed into a flaming resentment. Against his will he was being forced to regard her as an opponent, instead of an underling and he did not like the change.

These unaccustomed sensations kept him awake. Once the distant barking of a dog broke upon the stillness of the night so harshly that it made him jump. Then the thirst for revenge which consumed him merged with the physical and his mouth felt parched, as he remembered that he had had nothing to drink since lunch.

He got up and drained the water-bottle upon the washstand. It did not seem to slake his thirst. Dawn streaked the walls before he fell into a fitful sleep, shot with nightmare dreams, and split apart by a noise like the thunder of murderous guns.

He awoke with a throbbing head and the illusion that the roof of his mouth was a cavern fitted with instruments of torture, ready to jab at his tongue on the slightest provocation. There was a burning sensation in his throat. When he attempted to get out of bed he collapsed on the floor.

Laura found him there and got him back into bed. She smoothed the pillow, pulled the clothes around him and stood back.

"Would you like a cup of tea?" she asked.

It was an innocent enough question and he was on the point of nodding assent when he remembered. The water-bottle! She would put the stuff in that. And like a thousand fools he'd taken it. Then terror seized him. He felt a nameless horror for the woman standing by his side. There was something gnawing and terrible in her calmness. "A doctor!" he gasped. "By God—if you don't fetch a doctor—I'll—I'll get a doctor."

Her eyes widened. "Of course I'll get a doctor. If you feel as bad as that—I was going to suggest it anyway."

For a moment she stood looking at the red, mottled face upon the pillow. Was this really the man she had loved with a blind love which had amounted to worship? This gas-bag which, when pricked, collapsed into a pitiable state of ineptitude. He had bullied her for long enough. Now she knew.

"Doctor, I've been poisoned! Poisoned!" Bassanio could not conceal the terror which streaked his voice.

The doctor smiled. "Oh, no!" he explained. "You've got influenza. Pretty severely. You'll have to take care for a day or so."

"Don't you understand?" shouted Bassanio. "I'm being poisoned. I tell you. Slowly poisoned! It's been going on for months. She's doing it! My God, I burn all over. I'm on fire. Get me out of this house. I won't stay here to be murdered." The doctor looked grave. The patient was worse than he had thought. Delirious! Were they in for another epidemic of the 1918 type?

"Yes, yes," he said, soothingly. "It's that nasty-minded little microbe we call a streptococcus that's causing all the trouble. But you'll be all right in a day or two if you do as you're told. Your wife—"

"Don't let that woman come near me. You don't know what a snake-devil she is. I won't touch anything she brings. Do you hear?" He attempted to rise but fell back against the pillows. "I'll not eat a thing—"

You'll not be given a thing, my lad, with that fever, thought the doctor, as he went downstairs. "He's pretty bad," he informed Laura. "It's the most virulent type, and there's grave danger of broncho-pneumonia."

Bassanio was panic-stricken now. He was to be left to die. To die, horribly, painfully. The very walls seemed to press in upon him with a menace. Why had he ever come home? He must get out. He would not stay there another minute.

What did he care about money? Only to leave this accursed house.

He struggled to the edge of the bed and sat clapping his swimming head. His aching and swollen throat seemed lined with acid-blisters of parched parchment, and the surging throb of his brain made living an agony. He sat there swaying, trying to think—to remember something.

There was a bottle of laudanum he had had for tooth-ache. Where was it? He lurched to the dressing-chest and managed to open the drawers stealthily.

So she thought he was going to stay there to be poisoned, did she? Well, here was an alternative—a pleasanter way than the other. By a super-human effort he kept his balance, clinging to each drawer as it was opened.

She thought she was going to get away with a certificate for influenza, did she? If he had to die he would see that she should swing for it. God! What a revenge! It was almost—worth it—His breath was coming in gasps. Sweat poured from his body. Pain clouded his brain like a fog as his fingers closed over a small object.

There would be an inquest. He would see to that. She wasn't going to get away—with it—like those others. They'd find laudanum, yes—but they would also find arsenic.

Slowly his shaking legs crumpled beneath the weight of his body. As he sank to his knees he lifted the bottle to his lips and drank.

The doctor was on the point of leaving when they heard the thud. Laura had just said:

"You might send me down some more of these powders, doctor. I suppose it is all right to take it mixed with food?"

In her hand she held a small white paper package on which was written "Trib. Mag. Phos." And beneath, in smaller letters "For the Digestion."

GALLIPOLI REVISITED

Travel To Gallipoli

Another proud man of this region is a spruce, well-dressed Turk, a Turkish ex-naval officer who "served as a 'snotty' in the Lord Nelson, Sir. Aye-aye, Sir. At your service." All and sundry are polite and welcoming on the Gallipoli Peninsula, and, best of all, utterly and completely respectful of our sacred ground.

In conclusion, here is a serious suggestion to British shipping lines, which have so much tonnage idle. Why not organise really cheap tours to Gallipoli for those whose means are modest, and who would give nearly their all to make this pilgrimage? Even those who have none to mourn would be well repaid on visiting these battlefields and cemeteries, for they could not fail to gain in their British prestige on seeing the resting-places of those valiant heroes who came "from the utter-most ends of the earth" to fight for the good old country. And, having seen, they would more easily understand why, for once, we lost.
